

1077-35-171

Indranil SenGupta* (isengupta@utep.edu), Department of Mathematical Sciences, 500 W. University Ave., (Bell Hall), University of Texas- El Paso, El Paso, TX 79968, and Maria C. Mariani (mcmariani@utep.edu). Financial models used in biology.

Nonlinear analysis is a very useful tool for modern mathematical finance. We propose a model for some problem in biology. Under appropriate assumptions we use the techniques used in financial mathematics to solve that biological model. The technique depends on the use of nonlinear theory of partial differential equations. We show some applications of this problem. (Received August 06, 2011)